About me | Contact info

I'm a proud native of Austin, Texas. I have a degree in acting with a minor in astronomy and I've been designing for the Web since 1995, when I created a website for my improv troupe, Monks' Night Out.

I performed improv and sketch comedy for six years on Austin's famous 6th Street and I was an owner of a comedy club called the Bad Dog. I co-created the world's largest (at the time) improv and sketch comedy festival, the Big Stinker. I also performed in the critically-acclaimed original production Hooray for Gregory Peck.

Where I grew up
Austin, TX

Places I've lived
Taylor, TX; Abemarle, NC; Round Rock, TX; Leander, TX; Austin, TX; San Jose, CA

Companies I've worked for
The Nature Company; The University of Texas at Austin; Bad Dog Comedy Theater; Texas Parks & Wildlife; Office of the Governor of the State of Texas; Hoover's (a D&B Company)

Something I still can't find on Google winning lotto numbers from the future

My superpower
eating chips and salsa

Welcome to Aquarius

Aquarius is the longest standing online marketplace for translation and localization projects. Since February 1995 we help translation vendors find clients and assist businesses in locating reliable localization specialists.

What can you expect from us?

Jobs

Post and find jobs. Agencies and clients post jobs and qualified contractors quote on them online. Aquarius provides a convenient platform for automated RFQs and a project-based co-operation and file exchange.

Victor Rosenman
Experienced Amazon Specialist

About Me
I am an experienced developer & software architect with unique expertise in Amazon Technologies and E-Commerce in general. I consult online merchants/sellers to effectively list and manage their inventory on Amazon, eBay, Yahoo! and various shopping engines. Leveraging a portfolio of software tools I developed for this purpose, I help my clients to bulk-list their products with a great precision and cost efficiency. Customer satisfaction, professionalism and seamless communication are my primary goals with reviews coming second.

Announcing:

The Translator's Tool Box: A Computer Primer for Translators Version 8

As any good craftsman can tell you, it's not enough to simply have the right tool for the job—you've also got to know just how to use it. The Translator's Tool Box, written by working translator Jost Zetzsche, is filled with expert advice on which software tools you'll need to save time (and make more money), the best way to use these tools, and which popular tools you can do without. You'll find:

- Specific instructions for fine-tuning your operating system so it works best for you.
- A library of freeware and shareware programs that allow you to operate more efficiently—and advice on which applications to avoid at any price.
- Criteria to determine if you need desktop publishing and graphic software—and ways to finance it while attracting new clients.
- An insider's guide to computer-assisted translation tools—what they are and how they can work for you.
- How to translate complex file formats, including XML, help systems, desktop publishing formats, database content, and software development formats.

SDL Language Weaver Scales Down MT Complexity

Donald A. DePalma 26 October 2010
Filed under (Translation & Localization, Translation Technologies)

 Machine translation developers have been working over the last two years to remove three major obstacles to increased use of this technology – subject matter appropriateness, perceived linguistic quality, and the difficulty of integrating with other software such as content managers and enterprise resource planning (ERP). SDL Language Weaver is the latest machine translation (MT) developer to announce solutions to address these usability, quality, and integration issues. Read the rest of this entry »
